Dear [Redacted]

STAT

As I haven't heard from you since August 14, I presume that you are having a wonderful time [Redacted] and that your itinerary is according to your original schedule. I am frank with you, but I am very anxious to have you return home no later than about October 15 for this reason. After prodding some of my colleagues in the Reflection Pool Area, I have finally succeeded in locating at least three or four people who seem to have considerable enthusiasm in sponsoring the second phase of your project. As a matter of fact, two or three of them will visit your office next week in order to talk things over with [Redacted] who, by the way, is now taking her well earned vacation.

I am hoping that by the time you return and come to see me in Washington, (you certainly must do that) we will have a project outline firmed in our own minds.

A few words about your report. So far I have received favorable comments only. The distribution of the report has just been completed within my shop and a few copies to the outsiders, who are members of the Interagency Committee. I have asked them all to give me their honest opinion and criticism and by the time you return, I hope to have them all together. For your information, Volume 2, is still in the hands of the printer.

My family is back in town after a nice vacation at the shore, and we have all settled down to the old grind. My best to [Redacted] and I do hope that both you and she are continuing to enjoy your trip. See you soon.

Sincerely,

Michael G. Corson
